

Stay positive WYN! (What's Your Name) _____

Teacher _____

Boring adult information:

This is a "kids" 'emailbook' designed to be shared around, printed and bound for the kids to have their own activity book in class. Teacher reads, they can draw as the teacher reads and someone in the class can play the Cop. (Not recommended for quiet areas). Recommended for kids (or humans) aged 3+

Feel free to translate into any language before printing.

Feel free to pay $1 (Optional) if enjoyed by going to www.paypal.com click on 'Send & Request' and enter the code: findabridgeorbuidyourown@hotmail.com

Thank you, stay positive!

[Meet WYN ^ (What's Your Name)]

What's your name? Sings the policeman in the classroom. He's looking at you kid!

I'm _____! That's meeeeeeeeeeee eee ee  you sing.

The classroom laughs at you!

[Draw your singing face on WYN ^ ]

Are you sure about that? The policeman asks you in a serious way, after singing that way..

Yes you say.. And everyone laughed and giggled anyway as they drew some faces below..

[Draw your face on WYN ^]

[Draw your face when you win a race!]

[What about second place?]

[Last place?]

[Hey where you going!]

And what were you laughing at? Says the policeman to the teacher, quite seriously.

Ummmm says the teacher.. No, I just thought your joke was quite funny..

[Draw the teachers slightly worried face ^ ]

Tell me something then teacher, if you're the smart one here; 'What's an opposite thing to a funny thing? Do you even know of such a thing? The policeman looks at you too..

Or do I just need to ask a kid that? Ummmm says the teacher.. The opposite thing to a funny thing.. A serious thing?

No! Says the policeman with a serious face. Think about it, if something's funny and it makes you laugh, then what's the opposite to laughing?

Kids, can you please draw me what the opposite thing to laughing is on WYN?

There's many opposites to laughing says the policeman; crying is just one, if you're sad, it's ok, or maybe you're just upset, hurting or being hurt by someone, that's not fun. Or even being the angry one! Like all the time like some teachers are right? I don't know. Some teachers.. But that's not fun for anyone, and being afraid, concerned or way too coooold, hot hot hot or even just hungryyyrrrr.. It can be so frustrating and makes one grumpy too..

But being serious is ok.

The policeman looks at you, and with a serious grin he says; ok you, stand up and come to the front to draw your face on WYN.. So you do.. [Teacher, please choose a kid to stand up and draw]

WYN sounds like Winnie, says the policeman. Winnie the pooh, and with a name like that, oh poor.. Anyway, on the day of the race, Winnie got up to find out one of his running shoe's was out of place, he lost his shoe! Poor pooh.. Can you imagine his face on the day of the race without a running shoe?

Or maybe someone took IT.. The policeman looks at you, and to a few just sitting there quietly in the classroom, looking clueless about Winnie being shoeless. He looks at the teacher too..

It wasn't me! Says the teacher.. Everyone just laughed in the room...

ARE WE FINISHED!! Yells out the teacher to the room. The kids go quite and sit very still, like a bunch of mushy mushrooms..

That's very impressive! Says the policeman.. Look at them all staying positive and still in the room, Seriously!

Yes I know, says the teacher. But it's not me that's impressive; it's all of them that learned how to stop and listen, remaining positive in the room. As you can see.. It took some time, work and practice with a bit of patience indeed to achieve, but we did it, didn't we kids!

The kids all agree, and have a little giggle in the room..

Are we finished? The teacher calmly says to the kids. The kids go all quiet again but, for some reason you have a last little giggg.. The policeman looks at you.. And to the teacher too..

Hmm, yes, well I like the discipline in this room, it's very positive to see and impressive too.. So you, can you please draw your own face on WYN thinking of Winnie having aaaa, no shoe?

Now, says the policeman; is that a positive or a negative face you just drew?

Are you being silly today! You just say.. And everyone just laughs and laughs away, so do you!

ARE WE FINISHED!!! The policeman yells out in the room.. EVERYONE! Everyone goes very quiet and still, including you..

The policeman winks at you! And to the teacher too. But you try not to gigggg gigg gig but you do...

Clap! Clap! Clap! The teacher claps.. Everyone goes quiet in the room..

The policeman's face is seriously amazed! But he keeps his straight face on for you..

[Can you draw a serious policeman's straight and serious face?]

[Note* To draw a very serious and straight face, the mouth must be perfectly and seriously straight. The trick is to concentrate! Or to use something seriously straight, like a ruler]

As you concentrate on drawing the serious face, the teacher goes on to explain to the policeman that yes; are you being silly today is something we can just casually ask someone in this classroom. Sometimes if we're not really sure if someone is being serious or just being a silly dilly, we can just ask them honestly and no offence is intended to anyone here Mr policeman, including you..

I see, says the policeman. So why are some kids still giggling at me?

Oh, they want me to ask you if you're nuts also.. Excuse me? Says the policeman..

Yeah says the teacher; we can also ask if you're nuts if we think someone is being nutty around here too, just asking silly questions and things like.. Isn't it the same thing anyway? Being silly and being nuts?

The policeman looks at the teacher seriously and says nothing but CLAPS! CLAPS! CLAPS! Everyone goes back to being quiet and still in the room, the teacher too..

Ok then teacher; ask me something serious says the policeman.

Ummmm, says the teacher.. Can we call you a cop?

Can you call me a cop!!

Are you nuts? Of course you can call me a cop, I love cops! But only the positive serious ones that can be smart and a bit funny too, you know what I mean? Yes I do! Says the teacher; just like you?

Yes that's right! The policeman CLAPS! He smiles at you :)

Ok you! I want you to draw me any negative face you can think of on WYN, please?

*Ok, not bad, not good; so can you please now draw me a positive face on WYN?.. Maybe with a grin?
Or maybe with a wink? A positive blink, don't you think? And who in this room thinks they can wink?*

[Try it, put a grin and a wink on WYN ^ ]

Ok children, this has been a very good positive class we had today, so I'll be back says the cop. Next time we will be talking about the positive points we earn in life everyday doing everyday things that may seem dumb but it helps us stay positive in life. And if you collect negative points then well..

*We'll talk about that, but in the meantime we just say; the class yells out; Stay positive WYN!

No but wait! The teacher yells out. You forgot to tell us the moral of the story and why you're even here today.

Ummm.. Says the policeman with a seriously thinking face.

What do you mean teacher?

Ummm, says the teacher. Are you nuts?

No, I'm serious says the cop! But since you're the smartest one here, go ahead and tell us my dear..

Oh! Well ok then, I guess I am the smartest here, and that's why I'm the teacher, dear..

Ok then, go! Says the policeman..

Ok says the teacher; I think the moral of the story today is to stay positive, of course, which is being smart, and the smartest thing to do is to notice the positive and negative faces we can bring to the world, like on WYN. We can draw happy/sad faces on people by our actions, and being serious is ok?

Yes! That's very good says the policeman. Smart enough to stop and think before we act or even blink and just say things in any negative way, that's what I say. Staying positive everyday makes more positive faces around the world anyway, if we want to, we can.

Yes we can! Says the teacher. A little consideration and understanding goes a long way.

Yes! And that's the whole point of why I'm even here today! If there's more positive than negative faces walking around every day, then I wouldn't have to work so much!

Ok, don't get angry says the teacher.. Ok but.. I'm sorry says the policeman, smiling.

But the hardest thing in the world is to stay positive!!!!!!

Anyway, I'm going now so till next time, in the meantime we say.. Stay positive WYN! To win..

